Bio and Research Statement

Roberto is currently a Master of Arts student in the Religious Studies department and the University of Ottawa. He is also a recent graduate of the University of Ottawa's Faculty of Law National Program, having acquired both an LL.L (Civil law) and J.D. (Common law) degree.

His primary research interest centers on section 2(a) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms – freedom of conscience and religion – as it is interpreted, and applied, in relation to children and the nonreligious in Canadian society. More broadly, his interests also include religion in the public sphere, secularism, and other salient areas where law and religion interact.
