

Leo Van Arragon

Leo Van Arragon presently is a 4th year PhD candidate in the Religious Studies Department at the University of Ottawa. His research, conducted under the supervision of Lori G. Beaman, is on the role and regulation of religion in Ontario public education and he is a student team member of the SSHRC funded Religion and Diversity Project. He has presented conference and workshop papers on various aspects of religion in public education and was the co-organizer of a SSHRC funded workshop entitled “Whose Religion: Education about religion in public education.”